

Is Your Business Worth as Much as You Think?

As a successful business owner, you know that your business has value. It likely supports the lifestyle you and your family live. It provides a paycheck and perhaps benefits to the people you employ. The products or services you provide are meaningful to your clients. But if someone asked you, “How much is your business worth?” could you confidently provide a dollar amount?

Many business owners aren’t exactly sure what their businesses are worth. More commonly, many business owners overestimate the value of their businesses, based on rules of thumb, comparing what outwardly similar businesses have sold for, or simple gut feeling. Less commonly, owners undervalue their businesses for the same reasons. But one thing is clear: Failing to know what your business is worth right now can have negative consequences for how you plan for the future of your business. Why is knowing the value of your business today so important?

Knowing Your Business’ Value Can Guide Growth

A business’ value can be indicative of how well (or whether) it’s growing. While factors such as gross sales and cash flow play an important role in determining business value, they aren’t the only factors. For example, if your business’ yearly cash flow is around $3 million, and the equipment and property the business owns is worth $1 million, you might assume that the business’ value is around $4 million at the low end.

However, if your business’ cash flow results from two or three big clients, potential buyers may value the business below $4 million due to the risk of large losses if one of those clients leaves after a sale. Likewise, if you as the owner are the primary reason for strong cash flows, a potential buyer may reduce their assessment of the business’ value to reflect the cost and risk associated with you leaving. This is because if you were ever to leave the company, whether by choice or chance, revenue and cash flow can decrease or cease. Even if you never intend to sell your business, its value is primarily based on what qualified buyers would be willing to pay for it.

Peter Racen, CLU®, ChFC®, CASL®, CFP®, AEP®
peter.racen@nm.com

Northwestern Mutual Wealth Management Company®
www.peterracen.com
424 S. Woods Mill Road
Suite 110
Chesterfield, MO 63017
314-744-5270

In short, knowing what your business is worth right now—as a consequence of what you’re currently doing—can help you determine which areas of your business can improve to allow you to pursue your growth goals. Growth relies on numerous factors, some of which aren’t as obvious as hard numbers like cash flow. Awareness of these less obvious factors can get you thinking about and acting on strategies to potentially strengthen them in your business, which can help guide your business toward the growth you desire.

Knowing Your Business’ Value Can Solidify Your Planning

Without knowing what you currently have, it’s difficult to create a plan that allows you to pursue what you want and need. This applies to goals you may have for your post-business life, such as traveling more or spending more time with family or friends. It applies to goals you may have to leverage your business’ success as a force for good in the community, such as through charitable donations. It applies to estate planning goals you may have, such as passing wealth to future generations.

Whatever your future goals may be, it’s difficult to plan for how to pursue them without knowing what you currently have and what you will eventually need to adequately pursue them. Being overly ambitious about what you believe you can do, based on a gut feel or rule of thumb about what your business is worth, can damage how the business functions. Conversely, underestimating what your business is really worth today can focus your attention, allowing you to pursue important short-term and long-term goals right now.

Knowing Your Business’ Value Gives You Time to Adjust

Growing business value to a point at which you can achieve your goals can take years. It’s rarely as easy as flipping a switch or making a small change, yet many business owners severely underestimate how much time it takes. This commonly leads to burnout, especially when owners view the challenge of spurring growth as insurmountable. Knowing what the business is worth now can prevent you from burning out or staying in the business for longer than you want because it helps you determine how long it may take to build the business to where you need it to be.

Unless business ownership is merely a pet project, the value of your business will likely affect you, the goals you want to pursue, and the people and causes you care about. If you’d like help in learning about whether your business is worth as much as you think and to start considering strategies to make your business as valuable as you need it to be, contact us today.

The information contained in this article is general in nature and is not legal, tax or financial advice. For information regarding your particular situation, contact an attorney or a tax or financial advisor. The information in this newsletter is provided with the understanding that it does not render legal, accounting, tax or financial advice. In specific cases, clients should consult their legal, accounting, tax or financial advisor. This article is not intended to give advice or to represent our firm as being qualified to give advice in all areas of professional services. Exit Planning is a discipline that typically requires the collaboration of multiple professional advisors. To the extent that our firm does not have the expertise required on a particular matter, we will always work closely with you to help you gain access to the resources and professional advice that you need.

This is an opt-in newsletter published by Business Enterprise Institute, Inc., and presented to you by our firm. We appreciate your interest.

Any examples provided are hypothetical and for illustrative purposes only. Examples include fictitious names and do not represent any particular person or entity.

Northwestern Mutual is the marketing name for The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, Milwaukee, WI (NM) (life and disability insurance, annuities, and life insurance with long-term care benefits) and its subsidiaries. Peter Andrew Racen is a Representative of Northwestern Mutual Wealth Management Company® (NMWMC), Milwaukee, WI (fiduciary and fee-based financial planning services), a subsidiary of NM, and federal savings bank. All NMWMC products and services are offered only by properly credentialed Representatives who operate from agency offices of NMWMC. Representative is an Insurance Agent of NM and Northwestern Long Term Care Insurance Company, Milwaukee, WI, (long-term care insurance) a subsidiary of NM, and a Registered Representative of Northwestern Mutual Investment Services, LLC (NMIS) (securities), a subsidiary of NM, broker-dealer, registered investment adviser and member FINRA (www.finra.org) and SIPC (www.sipc.org).

The products and services referenced are offered and sold only by appropriately appointed and licensed entities and Financial Representatives. Financial Representatives and their staff might not represent all entities shown or provide all the services discussed on this Web site. Not all products and services are available in all states.

Peter Andrew Racen is primarily licensed in Missouri and may be licensed in other states.

CA License: #0D29950

AR License: #3201464

Certified Financial Planner Board of Standards Inc. owns the certification marks CFP®, CERTIFIED FINANCIAL PLANNER™ CFP® (with plaque design) and CFP® (with flame design) in the U.S., which it awards to individuals who successfully complete CFP Board's initial and ongoing certification requirements.

The Chartered Advisor for Senior Living (CASL®) designation is conferred by The American College of Financial Services.

©2019 Business Enterprise Institute, Inc. All rights reserved.